THE SASKATCHEWAN. New York papers print a despatch of the 1st of October from Ottaws, stating that intelligence has been received there by the Department of the Interior from Lientenant Governor Morris that he had just returned to Fort Garry from Links Winnipeg, where he had concluded a Treaty with the Salteaux and Swampy Crees. at Berrin's River, Norway House, and mouth of the Saskatchewan. The territory surrendered covers both sides of the lake and its estimated area, exclusive of water, is 50,000 square miles. By this Treaty free navigation of a portion of the lower Saskatohowan will be secured, as well as free access to the shore and inlets of Lake Winnipeg. 6

BEER IN TABLETS OR PASTE. It may be interesting to note that a method bas just been patented in France for fubricating beer concentrated in the shape of tablets or paste. For 1,000 litres of Strasburg beer in this form are required 380 to 400 kilogs, of mult or eprouted barley, 7 or 8 kilogs of hops, and about balf the ordinary quantity of water. The mixture is placed in a confiden with some fermentable augar, and boiled down. To propare it for use, 100 kilogs, of the concentrated product are added to 100 litres of drinking water, and after the lapse of 24 hours the ferment is put in. The vessel is filled up with water every 12 hours, and at end of 5 days the beer is ready for use. The ferment is kept separately, and added a few days the only before the beer is required for use. An addition to the patent provides for the preparation of the beer in capsules or packets, each containing enough for I litre of beer. The ferment-is prepared in separate packets of proportionate

DECLINE OF CATHOLIC INFLUENCE IN MEXICO.

A letter from Mexico in the Cologne Gazette gives an interesting account of the decline of the influence of the Roman Catholic Church in the Mexican Republic. In 1854 the city of Mexico contained twenty-nine religious houses, with about 500 monks and nuns. All the religious orders have now been abolished, and the extensive buildings which formerly belonged to them are used as barracks, schools, and so on Some of them are magnificent specimens of architecture, and the schools especially may congratulate themselves on the spacious consins of the House of Orleans, or to the in- national bolidays and festivals. The committee announce that they are sure of the co-operation of Germany, Italy, and France, where there are many admirers of the great thinker whose life was sublime in its severe simplicity. They hope that England will not be behind, and they have already obtained the assent of some of our most prominent leaders of thought, representative of different varieties of philosophical culture, to become honorary members. Among these we may mention the names of Messrs. Herbert Spencer, Huxley, and Tyndall: and they will probably be able to count upon Professor Jowett, Max Müller, Mr. G. H. Lowes, Dr. J. Hutchison Stirling, Professor Frager, Principal Tullock and Professor Alexander Bain. If we are to build the tumbs of the prophets whom our fathers stoned, it is certain that to none is the honour more justly due than to Baruch de Spinoza. THEME. It it not often that China furnishes a theme to an English poet, but in "Yu-Pe-Ya's Lute (London, Macmillan, 1874), Mrs. Augusta Webster has sought her inspiration from this uncommon source. The tale is founded on a Chinese legend, translated under the title of "Le Luth Brico," by M. Pavie. The story is very slight, and loses in nob of its delicate charm when reduced to simple prose. Yu-Pe-Ya is a high born and wealthy noble, and consummate master of the mystery of music and the lute. In his travels he meets with a peasant, Tse-Ky, whose musical skill is revealed by the mystic sympathy of the lute. Yu-Pe-Ya at first scorne his lowly craft-fellow, but soon disgovers that his command of the instrument and its lore is not inferior to his own Thereupon a friendship springs up between the two, and Yn-Pe-Xa invites Tee-Ky to accompany him to the great city; the latter reffees, as his aged parents are supported by bis labour, and the new friends part, Yu-Pe-Ya promising to come, back shortly and seek out his brother in song. After a year he returns, and as the summons of his lute brings no response from Tse Ky, he sets out to seek his dwelling. On his way he meets an old man,

Lao Pay, who turned out to be Tse-Ky's father,

LEA and PERRINS, of Wordester, and from him he learns that Tee-Ky is dead. Luo Pay conducts him to Tse-Ky's grave, over which Yn Pe Ya breaks his treasured lute, and then he returns sorrowfully to the city, having taken upon himself, as a pledge of his brother-hood for Tse-Ky, the burden of supporting his lost friend's parents. Such is an outline of the story told, with skill and delicacy by Mrs. ant from using the word "Worcestershire," or any word Webster. We have here an Oriental theme, only colourably differing therefrom, in consection with and the motives it Jouls with seem strange any Sauce manufactured by him, and any Labels or onough to Western ideas, but Mrs. Webster has managed to invest it with a tender interest, No attempt is made to make it, an accurate transcript of Chinese sentiment or life, nor or to use any Labels or Wrappers resombling their. to deck it with what is commonly called local colouring. Some-remarkable-statements-were-made-on-Monday by the Chevalier O'Clery, M.P., at a Home Rule meeting in Enniscorthy. He treated at length on the relations of Ireland and France. and said that had-Ireland been an independent nation during the late war with Germany, her sword would have been drawn in defence of France. It was to the reconstruction of France as a Christian and militant power that Ireland must look for the rescue of Rome and the restoration of the temporal power. She saw in France the destined avenger of that long reign of sacrilege and tyronny which had durkened Christendon-since 1860, and she had not forgotten the time when many of her sons stood in defence of Pius VI., side by side with the valiant volunteers of Bretagne and Vendee, on the heights of Costellidardo, and in the citadel of Spoleto. Speaking of Marshal MacMahon, he said be had devoted himself to the task of THE Undersigned has received a further France's military reorganisation; he was one of their own race, and he was performing his POUND for Preserving Timber from the work against the rapidly approaching day when Ravages of White Ants. the fears of Germany would translate them. selves into a renewal of unprovoked invasion, of Flooring. THE TURKISH REPUDIATION. The Economist remarking upon the failure of Turkey to meet in full the claims of her oreditors. says it is instructive to find that, in spite of the superficially improved situation of the finances of the country, and with money cheap and abundant, which has always been an important matter to such financing, the catastrophe is not averted. The radical unsoundness of the system could not have been more clearly shown than by its coming to an end in direnmstances like these. The truth is that, in spite of the superficial improvement exhibited, the real unsoundness was unchanged, and the one event having happened which brings this unsbundness to light, it becomes impossible for the system to go on. But it is the inherent un. soundness of the system which has brought it te an end, and not anything extraneous. It is instructive to notice the synical indifference of of the Turkish Government to the interests of the financial class who have belstered up its credit, as well as to the interests of the public creditor, now that more money is not to be had. The batte of the announcement is remarkable. If the Government had really thought of its fature credit at all, it had plenty of time before the next dividend payment to propose some arrangement to the bondbolders which might have been as serious a reduction of their income as what is now proposed, but have caused a slighter shock. But it goes out of its way to precipitate the crash, careless of what may follow. This indifference, while it marks the financial barburism of the Turkish Government itself, which has not yet got to the stage of seeing the value of good ciedit, also proves incidentally how great the stringency must have been -- how absolutely impossible it had become to obtain. money for the Constantinople exchequer by the easy device of borrowing. The Turkish Government, not finding money easily in the old way, turns round with absolute indifference, and Yeaves boudbolders, financiors, and speculators to their loss. The practical question will now be the extent of the disaster, and it will plainly be a very great one.

THE COMMERCIAL REIGN OF TERROR.

Peace, except in Spain, being restored, Napoleon turned with accustomed energy to lieved, was to secure the ruin and defeat of England, and which had been for some time permanent moisture. As Dr. Shaw says in neglected. The ports of the Continent from Dantsic to Trieste were kept closed with unsparing rigour : enormous scizures were made of merchandise, and, as if to show that the Empire was as destructive in peace as it could be in war, clouds of insolent soldiers and official despoilers were employed in devastating the trade of Europe. A commercial Reign of Terror was, in fact, introduced, and, to add insult to the sting of oppression, France was large exempted from this blighting tyranny, while throughout her subject or ing harshness. The oppressiveness of the which cattle become intoxicated to an alarm- possible to the buman race—sculpture a Continental System recoiled upon its author: if injured England in some degree, yet much less than might be supposed; but through the dependencies of the French Empire it

The girls then started for the shore, leaving the deer struggling between life and death in the water. Reaching the shore one of the girls ran to a small log cabin, one-sighth of a mile distant, in which lived a family by the name of Berger, and told what had occurred. Mr. Berger seized his rifle and went to the pond, where he found the wounded deer yet struggling in the water. He rowed out to it, and, seizing it becomes to all appearance a soured and d by the antiers, cut its throat, and then towed the body to the shore. The deer was the largest ever killed in the neighbourhood, weighing 227 pounds.

ING CLIMATE.

We have many times called attention to instances of the injurious effects on climate of the wholesale cutting down of forests. An interesting account, communicated some time ago to the Linnman Society by Dr. Shaw, furnishes an example of another kind, and shows us how the vegetation and to the other.
